In the dynamic landscape of today's workplace, the significance of soft skills cannot be overstated. Recognizing this, the BoostTrainRetain project has embarked on an ambitious journey to empower HR managers with the necessary tools and knowledge to enhance the soft skills of employees.

Work Package 2 (HR Stuff 2.0) marks a crucial phase in our project journey. Through focused group discussions held in all partner countries with HR managers, we diligently collected insights, analyzed results, and crafted educational materials. These materials, comprising training pills and learning tools, aim to assist HR managers in boosting the soft skills of employees effectively. Moreover, these resources are designed not only for HR professionals but also for direct use by employees, facilitating their personal skill development journey.

The primary objective of HR Stuff 2.0 is to identify the needs, gaps, and areas for improvement within the HR departments of our target organizations. Thorough research and analysis are essential to develop tailored training materials and tools that address these identified needs comprehensively. The versatility of these tools is paramount, ensuring they can adapt to various organizational contexts and personal situations, ultimately fostering holistic well-being among employees.

This work package is pivotal in achieving the overarching objectives of our project. By equipping HR departments with the necessary competencies for talent motivation and retention, we aim to enhance organizational performance and foster a conducive work environment. Additionally, by facilitating training and retention initiatives, we contribute to the broader goals of the EU, including the promotion of work-life balance and the reduction of unemployment.

Through the manual developed as a tangible outcome of HR Stuff 2.0, we aim to provide HR departments with a roadmap for success in their daily operations. This comprehensive resource will serve as a valuable guide, offering practical insights and strategies grounded in Emotional Intelligence principles.
